We are recruiting for a Community Health and Wellbeing Worker to join our team at Battersea Fields GP practice and across our community, working on a part time basis (18hrs/week).

What is a Community Health and Wellbeing Worker (CHWW)?

A CHWW is available to talk to you about your health, offer support where appropriate and let you know about services and activities available to help with your health and wellbeing, whether you have existing health issues or not. They are available to meet you in your home, in the community, and be contactable via email, phone, text or WhatsApp during their working hours.

As a CHWW you will have your own 'patch' that you are responsible for, building relationships with and assessing the needs of the community and individual households. You will work with the local primary care team and partners to ensure that any health and social care issues that might arise get resolved quickly. Where there is a need, you might organise community health education groups, signpost to other community assets, identify individuals eligible for services that haven't been accessed, and reinforce positive public health messaging.
